

AFFAIRS of the HEART

By Mrs. Thompson
V. S. and M. M. W.: My answer to your questions is the same. You can hardly expect all of the young man's attention.

worry about his attentions to others. He likes you or he would not ask to go out with you.
Is it wrong for a divorced woman to be friendly with her former husband? This is the question put to me in the following letter:

Do you think so? Also please tell me what side should I sleep on in order to get a good rest.
It is rather irregular for you to have social relations with your former husband, but there is nothing wrong about it.

"No," was the reply. "Well, do you happen to know where I can find him?" "No," said the other. The traveler was puzzled.

"But," expostulated the tenderfoot traveler, "they told me that Blank lived within gunshot of you." "Well," said the other, "he did."

"Secrets of Night" at Torrance

Scene from "SECRETS OF THE NIGHT" UNIVERSAL ALL STAR JEWEL

This is about "Secrets of the Night, which will be shown at the Torrance Theatre Sunday and Monday. A mysterious hand was silhouetted against Mrs. Knowles' door. The shadowed fist clasped an automatic pistol.

He was the president of the biggest local bank, a bachelor, with a good reputation, dead in his own home, but in a woman's room—with another man's wife to attest to the crime.

The great Andrews home became turbulent in an instant. A passing policeman heard the shot. It was now 2:30 in the morning. Everyone was terrified. The male guests began to accuse each other. A pistol was treacherously passed from one to the other. Then the coroner entered. All were placed under arrest.

"Who were his enemies?" the law's officer demanded. And again everybody accused everybody else. Into two automobiles they were hustled, before dawn, half dressed, scandalized and stricken with fear.

Suddenly a series of shots rang out. The officers hesitated sufficiently to allow their prisoners to dash back into the house. The search was resumed. But suddenly an even greater mystery faced them. Andrews' body had disappeared! And then one of the strangest mysteries ever screened was solved. But you must see "Secrets of the Night," the greatest Universal-Jewel production, with an all-star cast including James Kirkwood, Madge Bellamy, Zazu Pitts, Rosemary Theby, Tom Wilton.

Zane Grey's Story at Lomita

Raymond Griffith and Louise Fazenda in the Paramount Picture "The Night Club"

Of the many worth-while and impressive features in the picture, the one thing that stands out above everything else in Paramount's latest thriller, "Code of the West," which comes to the Lomita today and tomorrow, is the individual and collective performances of the talented cast. It is quite evident that William K. Howard, who produced the picture, exercised unusual care in the selection of the players, for even the minor parts are played by actors of long experience and recognized ability.

The leading roles are in the capable hands of some of screen-dom's most popular favorites. Owen Moore, whose ingratiating personality is well known to film fans, heads the list of featured players in the part of an awkward Arizona cowboy who turns caveman to win the love of a girl.

Constance Bennett, one of the most promising of the new crop of screen luminaries, plays the feminine lead opposite Moore. Mabel Ballin, who starred in many notable film productions and scored so heavily in "Vanity Fair"; Charles Ogle, famous character actor; and David Butler, popular heavy, are the other featured players. The supporting cast includes Lillian Leighton, Edward Gribbon, Gertrude Short, Pat Hartigan, and Frankie Lee.

Comedy and a news reel are also on the same program. Coming Sunday night only is Bobby Talcott and his Musical Comedy Revue, one of the best road shows of its kind on the coast. This company carries a chorus that is unequalled for beauty and grace. Their opening bill, "The Wrong Widow," is one of the best farces ever written. It has for its principal comedy characters typical Weber and Fields types, which are capably handled by Mr. Talcott and Mr. Hipp. This company carries its own vaudeville specialties in conjunction with the musical comedy, and a good harmony trio. There are novelty girl numbers, and the show is positively clean throughout. The picture program includes Raymond Griffith in "The Night Club" and a Fast Stepper comedy.

Monday Cy Haskins and his Country Store will be the featured attraction, "East of Broadway," featuring Owen Moore and an all-star cast, will be shown.
